CONVOCATION 2022 HONORARY DIPLOMA RECIPIENT

Linda Ann Daly, BA, CYW, MPA

Longtime Community Advocate and Supporter and Philanthropist

Linda Ann Daly has a wealth of experience supporting others, both in her professional life and as a volunteer. While she retired in 1998 from St. Lawrence College as Coordinator and faculty member of the Child and Youth Worker program, she has continued to stay involved with the college, and stay interested in helping student success. In retirement she continues to be a committed volunteer in the Kingston community, helping both individuals and organizations succeed. She is passionate about helping young people succeed, whether they are students pursuing a college diploma in a new country or young graduates navigating how to enter the workforce.

What does this award mean to you personally?

It is deeply meaningful to receive this prestigious award.

As a young girl growing up in a small Ontario town, I saw my parents continually giving back, by being involved, being aware, caring about others, engaging whatever resources were needed to simply help others/organizations move forward with no expectation of anything in return.

This award represents recognition of the many hours that so many people give as volunteers, whether it be on boards, community agencies, in healthcare, and in recreation programs. I am merely one of thousands and I'm so proud to stand with every one of them.

This award also represents recognition for taking on leadership and advocacy roles, despite many challenges, in order to create pathways forward, access to opportunities and inclusion for all. Every day I'm inspired by others, from whom I learn and grow.

How have SLC students or the college in general intersected with your work or community?

Early in my teaching career at SLC in the Child and Youth Worker program, I developed a Detached Worker Program. I received funding from Rotary and Citizen Service Clubs and hired four SLC students for one year, each to work with a youth referred by Social Service agencies, with an emphasis on having the youth accountable for their behavior.

After retirement, I've worked with Business students with St. Lawrence Parks Commission projects as well as at Dress for Success, Kingston; Vet tech students and grads greet me regularly when boarding my cat or at the vet clinics; a Social Service Worker student supported my mother when she was in palliative care, and graduates are employed within the healthcare system, and at community agencies I engage with regularly.

My husband and I created a bursary at SLC, Carleton and Queen's, for International and Indigenous students and stay connected with several recipients.

What path have you followed, that sees you here today? What were some ingredients of your success?

Learning and seeking new experiences have characterized my path. In my final semester at Carleton, I was still unsure what I wanted to do, until a tremendous professor talked about a program to work with youth with emotional difficulties. I applied and for the next 12 months trained at the Ottawa Psychiatric Hospital, graduating with a 'Child Care Worker'

Diploma! My first job was a counselor at Port Alberni Residential School in British Columbia. I then worked with street children on probation in downtown Vancouver for two years, before returning to Ontario and gained employment as a Probation Officer in Ottawa with adults, then juveniles.

With this experience, I was hired at SLC Kingston to teach in the CYW program! I got involved with Big Sisters, John Howard Society, St Lawrence Youth Association, and during the summer I would often volunteer in a youth program outside of Kingston.

I started the first woman-led bicycling summer touring company called Bicycling Ontario and ran that for two years before deciding to return to school to complete my Masters of Public Administration part time.

I served on the Board of Governors of Kingston General Hospital and was part of the largest re-development project in the hospital's history. I was appointed to the transitional Council of Registered Psychotherapists and Registered Mental Health Therapists of Ontario, and to the St. Lawrence Parks Commission. Additionally, elected to the Board of Governors at Carleton University, and Dress for Success, Kingston, where I continue to volunteer. Mentoring both international and domestic students, a Little Sister, as well as helping refugees transition to life in Kingston, have taught me invaluable lessons for which I am forever grateful. I have received meaningful awards including the Grand Theatre Lifetime Achievement Award for Contribution to the Arts and our Community, the Queen Elizabeth Diamond Jubilee Award, and the Paul Harris Fellow Award, Rotary International.

I have led successful fundraising events for the Kingston Symphony Association, The Grand Theater and Dress for Success, Interval House, tsunami relief for the Red Cross, Teachers in Afghanistan, the local Food Sharing Project, and more.

Who has been your biggest inspiration, and why?

My English teacher in high school who encouraged me to always aim higher. My father who taught me never to be greedy, boastful, self-centered; that I would have to make my own decisions once I left home. My students, refugees and international students that I have engaged with, for their courage, tenacity, eagerness to learn and share their world. Rodrigo, our Rotary student from Brazil, who laughed with us, cried with us, saw the world in new ways, and shared with us his unquenchable thirst for learning.

What words of inspiration/wisdom can you share with SLC graduates?

You will meet with many challenges and opportunities, you will face uncertainty, maybe discrimination in one of its many forms. You may switch directions – as I would often say to students: the job you may one day have is not even invented yet.

Build a strong personal foundation, know who you are and what matters most to you. What line will you not cross? Commit to ongoing professional development – to learn, to grow, to become more humble and possibly, to advocate for someone who is unable to help themselves, to improve their situation and ultimately to empower them to act on their own.

Commit to advocacy – think about gaps in services, at work, in your community, and do something constructive, apply your skills so that others can benefit; promote an idea for the betterment of all, and use your network and communication skills to bring about positive action.

CONVOCATION 2022 HONORARY DIPLOMA RECIPIENT

Christine Bruce, MHA, MLT, CHE

Senior Director, Laboratory Medicine Program, University Health Network

Christine Bruce is a respected leader in a highly specialized field – that of Medical Laboratory Technology – one that is not well-known to the general public, but which is a vital health-care specialization. As Senior Director, Laboratory Medicine Program at the University Health Network in Toronto, Christine now leads the largest hospital diagnostic lab in Canada and one of the largest academic labs in the world. Under her leadership, her team was the first in Ontario to test for the COV-2 virus in February 2020, and were the first in the province to begin testing saliva for COVID.

What does this award mean to you personally?

I am really humbled to receive this prestigious honour, and to still have a strong tie to my alma mater and the Medical Laboratory Science program 25 years after my own graduation. I'm even more pleased to be able to shine a light on the essential field of medical laboratory science. I have been fortunate in my career, and it's a personal joy to positively affect the health of millions of Canadians, through daily contributions and acts of service. I owe so much to the SLC faculty for their early mentorship and guidance this college gave me a shot at landing here before you today.

I am especially grateful to Robin McAvoy for continuing to be my champion and nominating me. Robin is a tremendous spokesperson for laboratory medicine and the long-term strength of the St. Lawrence MLS program. She continues to engage me on numerous program initiatives, knowing she can always count on me to be on board with whatever she needs.

How have SLC students or the college in general intersected with your work or community?

One of the great things about medical laboratory sciences students is the workplace preceptorship – designed to hone the students' precision technical skills, and readying for the workplace. Shaping the future of the profession means you must get involved and participate. I have been fortunate to work in diverse settings, where students are welcome for clinical placements for both the technologist and technician programs. This placement access can often be a rate limiting step – so I know, as a workplace leader, that I have a duty to give back to the system in this way.

Another way SLC intersects in my work community is through my participation on the SLC MLS Program Advisory Committee. It is essential for the educators and employer placement sites to constantly connect on issues affecting the profession. It's a responsibility I take seriously. Having the opportunity to provide the program with real world insights on changes in practice, ideas on capacity building and sustainability are important for all stakeholders. And it's great fun. To sit with a group of industry peers, be they employers, educators, preceptors, or student ambassadors, is such a rich experience. I learn something new every time we meet, and I appreciate the networks SLC facilitates.

What path have you followed, that sees you here today? What were some ingredients of your success?

The path that got me here was simply being willing to try, and not being afraid to stumble. My roles and my successes within them have resulted from me focusing on the art of the possible and creating the best patient outcome – and just going for it. What's the downside? You stumble a few times, fall a few times, and you start to succeed. You can't help but build courage, resilience, and trust in your instincts. You gain tremendous perspective once you exercise that courage and see how few limits there really are – and most critically you see how you can change a patient's life.

When I started the MLS program, I thought finding a good vein and collecting blood would be my biggest professional problem. When I look back now – what was I worried about? People have their blood collected every day, I just needed to give it a try. And so, after a career full of 'trying' to be a good laboratory technologist, to setting up the gold standard COVID testing operation in a crisis, to installing some of the world's largest laboratory automation systems, all the way to identifying novel diagnostics that improve health outcomes across the country....my courage on what I am willing to try has changed dramatically, and for the better – but my 'why' has never changed; it has always been better patient outcomes with lab medicine as a foundation.

Who has been your biggest inspiration, and why?

I absolutely must pay tribute to two people. Firstly, Sandy Gillespie – an amazing woman from LifeLabs whom I met in 2000. She taught me how to lead. It turns out being a leader in healthcare is my calling. I owe Sandy the credit for literally everything I am proud of. She has been a trusted advisor, weatherer of all of my storms, and the truest of friends. She has helped me understand my personal brand as a leader. Close to 20 years of mentorship has helped me solidify my values, and to understand how I can impact people in a meaningful way. She has taught me to 'go slow to go fast' and to take the time to say 'please and thanks' – it matters. Being an authentic servant leader is not easy, but I am always reminded in her steady tone that 'no one comes to work to do a bad job – people just need to know what success looks like and to know you are in their corner, ready to serve'.

The second person who has been a tremendous inspiration to me, is Dr. Tony Mazzulli. I met Tony in 2019, and he perhaps most bravely of anyone, taught me how to follow. We embarked on expanding our microbiology lab to being the first and then largest, hospital COVID testing site in Ontario. It was a massive undertaking in record time with no roadmap. I had just joined his team just prior to the pandemic, as a trusted leader. I could have simply run into the fire of setting up this operation, believing I could handle it, no problem. I had courage. I learned quickly that I could not handle it on my own. I will always be grateful for his coaching moments, when he sat me down and respectfully illustrated the gaps in my knowledge and perspective. He helped me get better at saying I was wrong, saying I didn't know, saying I needed help, and most importantly, saying I was sorry. With Tony, I learned humility. Sometimes being a great leader means being a humble follower. I am lucky to have him as a mentor and advisor – and I am forever grateful for his wisdom and his friendship.

What words of inspiration/wisdom can you share with SLC graduates?

I maintain that my successes have come from my desire to know what my industry is all about. I am absolutely a laboratory technologist at heart. But to be a good one, with the influence to make this career landscape better for every patient that walks around on it, I have had to learn the way the entire space works. I have committed a significant part of my career to understanding the workplace, academics, certification, politics, funding, accreditation, operations, and innovation related to both public and private Canadian laboratory medicine. Understanding how all of these levers are pulled and when, has made me a nimble operator and credible leader. It is meaningful, and this knowledge has clarified where I have needed to round out my own skills, with added credentials, and has also helped me define how to create great places to work for the teams I lead.

Do not underestimate the true power of asking why things are the way they are. As new graduates, you aren't seeking a job. You are the next ambassador for your industry. Understand it from every angle, because it will bolster your value and make you incredibly confident. This is the start of your career long learning – be open. Be inquisitive and never stop putting tools in your toolkit.
