CONVOCATION 2025 HONORARY DIPLOMA RECIPIENT

Julie Tompkins

(Retired) Vice-President, Corporate Services and Chief Executive Officer, Empire Life

What does this award mean to you personally?

I'm incredibly honoured to be chosen to receive this award. I've always been so proud both to be a graduate and to have had the opportunity to stay connected and support the College in a number of ways over the years. The foundation for my career and achievements started with SLC and, having recently retired, receiving this honour now feels like things have come full circle in a way that is surprising and very gratifying.

How have your interactions with St. Lawrence College influenced your path and the work that led to this award?

When I arrived at SLC with a three-year university degree and not a lot of focus or direction, I almost immediately felt like I belonged. My professors had a faith in me that I didn't yet share, and they gently but firmly pushed me to reach further, to try new things, to believe in myself. I got involved in extracurricular activities and made friendships and connections that continue today. After graduation, I occasionally came back to share my perceptions and experiences with other students. I was later invited to participate in SLC's Community Council and several strategic brainstorming initiatives and to join, and then chair, the College's Foundation Board. Through these activities, I was able to appreciate what a gem SLC is by virtue of its leadership, staff, students, and graduates - and how lucky I am to be an alum. I've hired and worked alongside SLC grads of communications and marketing, design, IT, finance and human resources for most of my career, because they consistently bring the best qualifications, experience, and outlooks in their fields. I can say without exaggeration that everything I learned in my program I used - and used often - as I built my career and volunteer experiences.

What wisdom would you share with SLC graduates based on your own experiences in your education and career?

Disruption and change are constant, perhaps especially so today. Avoid falling into the trap of not trying new things because either they've never been done before or because they've always been done a certain way. Allow yourself to make mistakes and, if you're in a leadership position, make sure your team members know that most mistakes can, and should, be learning opportunities. Find a community or group to connect with and share your talents, insights and time. Most of all, respect others - even those you don't agree with - and believe in yourself. Congratulations on what you've achieved so far; now hold on tight and enjoy the ride!

CONVOCATION 2025 HONORARY DIPLOMA RECIPIENT

Dr. Jagdeep Singh Walia

Professor of Pediatrics at Queen's University, partner of the Times New Roman Medical Tree Clinic, President of Kingston Sikh Cultural Association

What does this award mean to you personally?

Receiving this honorary diploma from St. Lawrence College is a profoundly humbling experience. When I reflect upon the distinguished individuals who have received this honour before me, I am filled with deep respect and gratitude, not only towards the College and my nominators, but also towards the broader community that has embraced and supported my journey. My guiding principles, rooted in the Sikh faith, emphasize selfless service to humanity, striving always to uplift others without expectation of recognition. This award is a testament to those values and serves as a reminder that sincere efforts to serve the community do not go unnoticed. It affirms for me that when we act with honesty and compassion, our actions can inspire and resonate far beyond our immediate circles. I am truly grateful for this recognition, which I accept on behalf of all who work quietly and tirelessly to build stronger, more inclusive communities.

How have your interactions with St. Lawrence College influenced your path and the work that led to this award?

Since arriving in Kingston in 2012, I have come to regard St. Lawrence College as a cornerstone of our region's academic and cultural life. My interactions with SLC, initially through personal and professional relationships with faculty, and later as President of the Kingston Sikh Cultural Association, have deeply enriched my understanding of community engagement and the transformative power of education.

Collaborating with SLC members and faculty, our association worked to welcome and support the increased number of international students SLC was hosting, as they navigated new challenges in a foreign land. The Gurudwara became a sanctuary for many, regardless of their background, reflecting our belief in helping others and the importance of extending a hand to all in need. I have also had the privilege of contributing to various SLC programs, especially in Health Care Administration, as a speaker, job facilitator, advisory board member, and through hosting students at the Medical Tree Clinic. It has been inspiring to see the growth of SLC students turn into leaders in our community. Each interaction has reaffirmed my conviction that when we unite across cultures and disciplines, we foster an environment where everyone can thrive. I am deeply grateful to the Board of Governors and the community for recognizing these collaborative efforts, which are truly a collective achievement.

What wisdom would you share with SLC graduates based on your own experiences in your education and career?

As a physician-scientist, my journey has been guided by a passion for learning and discovery. From my earliest days in medical school, I was drawn to the mysteries of the brain, eventually focusing on gene therapy-based research—a path that led me to Canada. Throughout, my faith has been my compass, reminding me that our true calling lies in serving others and seeking knowledge with humility.

To the graduating class, I offer this: Seek out what ignites your curiosity and passion and pursue it with unwavering perseverance. The road may be long, and success may not always come swiftly but remain steadfast in your purpose.

Have confidence in your abilities, and trust in something greater than yourself, whether that is your faith, your community, or the shared values that unite us. Remember, learning does not end with graduation. Embrace the mindset of a lifelong student, open to new experiences and lessons from every person you meet. Do not fear failure; it is often the greatest teacher. True fulfillment comes not from accolades, but from the journey of growth, learning, and service. Congratulations on reaching this milestone! May you continue to build bridges, uplift others, and strive for excellence in all your endeavours. My heartfelt best wishes are with each of you as you embark on the next chapter of your journey.
